Jurns Urges U.S. dopt Tougher lules to Save Oil

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (WP).-Federal Reserve chairman ur Burns today prodded the Ford administration to move away voluntary "to stronger measures" for energy conservation, such "sizable" gas tax, a tax on imported oil, a tax on auto weight respower, or gasoline rationing.

Later in the day, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said that President Ford had spent three hours yesterday evening going over the energy situation and is "still opposed" to an mcrease in gasoline taxes.

But Mr. Nessen said that administration officials are discussing new proposals, along with an analysis of how the voluntary program is working to be pre-sented to President Ford in about two weeks.

During his testimony, Mr. Burns revealed that the Treasury has en quietly working" on a set of strong conservation measures "along the lines" he had

Mideast Foes Are Said to Bar War

CAIRO, Nov. 27 (UPI).—UN Secretary-General Kurt Wald-helm has received assurances from Israel, Syria and Egypt that there will be no military conflict in the foreseesble future as long as efforts toward finding a just and lasting Middle East peace settlement are being made, diplomatic sources said today.

The sources said that the assurances "from both sides" offered an opportunity for "an im-mediate start next month toward finding a political solution in the

Ethiopia Military Spokesman Denies Plan to Kill Emperor

An Ethionian military snokesman today denied a report by a Beirut newspaper that deposed Emperor Haile Selassie may be executed in the next two days. He termed the report "irresponsible fabrications aimed at discrediting Ethiopia's military reform movement."

A French-language newspaper in Beirut, L'Orient-Le Jour, quoted Western diplomatic sources as saying the 82-year-old former emperor had been moved from detention in Addis Ababa to a town 30 miles away in preparation for the execution.

The spokesman said the former emperor was still under guard in Addis Ababa. The deposed ruler was arrested in September. In Washington, the State Department said today that the Ethiopian Foreign Ministry had assured the U.S. Embassy in Ethiopis that there were no plans execute the former emperor.

60 Stain Sixty former government officlais and military officers were killed last Saturday. The government has asserted that 59 were executed and Lt. Gen. Aman Andom, former head of the provisional military regime, was slain resisting arrest.

The State Department also said it had appealed to the Ethionian regime not to execute any more former government officials.

Meanwhile, two thousand troops from Addis Ababa have arrived in the northern province of Eritrea reinforce the 12,000-man 2d Army Division against secessionist guerrillas, reliable foreign sources reported today. More troops were reported en canital. The reports fueled speculation that hardliners on the Supreme Military Council have ordered an all-out offensive against the Eritrean Liberation Front, which has been fighting an intermittent war for independence for the last 10 years.

The guerrillas have about 3,000 active fighters.

Gen. Aman refused to sign an order directing reinforcement of the troubled province, the population of which is roughly half Moslem hereuse he had honed to reach a political peace agreement with the Kritrean Liberation Front. This issue was one of the factors that led to his resignation as head of the Military Council about two weeks ago and his eventual death.

The elimination of Gen. Aman permits other council members who range from field-grade officers to enlisted men, to take more vigorous action against the Liberation Front guerrillas. The guerrillas, however, have held out successfully against military pressure for 12 years.

The reinforcements moving to Eritrea reportedly include units of the Imperial Guard, or 1st Army Division, A possible reason for moving the Imperial Guard to Eritrea would be to forestall trouble from the locally based 2d Division, which some sources said had been fond of Gen. Aman, who had also been popular with the 3d Division.

It was the first public PLO an-nouncement of action taken against any persons associated with Palestinian guerrilla units. Other hijackers have been handed over to the PLO by various Arab governments, but have never been tried publicly.

an Indian stewardess wounded Egypt, which acceded to the hijackers' demand to free five jailed guerrillas, was particularly outraged and called for a highlevel Arab conference to define resistance activity, and "criminal acts."

The swift action taken by the PLO showed its determination to ssert its authority as the sole representative of the Palestinian people, guerrilla sources said. Mr. al-Hout said the PLO was not involved in taking similar ac-tion against those involved in an assassination plot against King Fatah, the largest guerrilla unit under the PLO umbrella, had admitted responsibility and it was up to el-Fatah to take any disciplinary action.

Peking Said to Look for Shift On Taiwan in Kissinger Talks

PEKING. Nov. 27 (AP).—Secretary of State Henry Kissinger conferred again today with top Chinese officials, who were understood to be looking for signs that Washington is prepared to reduce its commitment to the Taiwan government.

The Chinese believe that duction in the U.S. commitment to Taiwan would advance the nor-malization of relations between Washington and Peking, a goal set by the 1972 Shanghai commu

The mood of the meeting, held in almost total secrecy, was described by the U.S. delegation as

"very friendly."

Mr. Kissinger apparently is trying to move slowly on the Taiwan issue, partly because who will succeed Chairman Mao Tsetung, 80, and ailing Premier Chou En-lai, 76, is unclear, Also, Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev's outright rejection yesterday of a Chinese proposal on settling the border dispute with Moscow makes an immediate easing of tensions between the two Communist powers unlikely. Taiwan Manifesto On Taiwan, the Central Committee of the ruling party issued a manifesto which claimed that the Peking regime would remain a threat to world security no matter how its relations change with the Soviet Union or the West. The manifesto, adopted unanimously by 1,100 party leaders, condemned efforts by Western nations to seek détente with Peking as being "like trying to

U.S. Ceases Pressing for NATO Funds

BRUSSELS, Nov. 27 (UPI) -The United States has eased pressure on its allies to share more of the cost of Western defense, NATO sources said to-

The reasons include both the growing European balance of payments deficit and an increase in European defense spending over the past year, the sources said. A well-placed NATO source said that he doubted that "burden-sharing," as the issue is known, will loom large when NATO defense and foreign ministers meet here for their annual winter meeting Dec. 10-13. In the past, these meetings have always seen U.S. secretaries of state and defense pressuring the Europeans to ease the American burden by paying more toward the upkeep of American troops in Europe.

Congress passed an amendment last year ordering the President report regularly on whether the Europeans were paying enough or buying enough U.S. arms to offset the cost of these troops. If not, the amendment said, some of the troops should be brought back to the United report said that these costs now seem to be totally offset. This, it said, was because of West German payments of $1.1 billion, plus payments by other Europeans of $800 million. Both NATO and U.S. sources admitted privately that this conclusion stemmed from bookkeeping by Pentagon accountants un-der orders to keep U.S. troops in Enorpe. Under this bookkeeping, European arms purchases that had never been included in offset costs before were wrapped into the new figures.

But the European nations also face a payments outflow of $40 billion this year because of higher oil prices. U.S. officials said that the Europeans are probably unable to pay more to the United States, no matter how much U.S. pressure is applied.

ATHENS, Nov. 27 (NYT).-King Constantine promised last night that if he returned to Greece he would be a figurehead monarch, devoted to "democratic braciples" and subject "in every case to the will of the sovereign people.'

Greeks will vote Dec. 8 on whether to recall the King to the throne or establish a republic.

Major Turkish Party Plans To Vote Against New Cabinet

Republican People's party (RPP) announced today that it would vote against the new cabinet of Premier Sadi Irmak, assuring its defeat and reopening a government crisis

In other developments, Turkey devalued its currency against West European currencies, politicians predicted trouble if Archbishop Makarios returns to Cyprus and new campus violence erupted between rightist and leftist students.

The RPP, led by former Premier Bulent Ecevit, said that it had decided to vote against the Irmak government in Friday's confidence vote in the National Assembly.

The RPP's 186 votes and the 49 votes of the National Salvation party (NSP), which announced its opposition earlier, constitute a majority in the 450-seat assembly.

Mr. Irmak's fall would reopen a government crisis that began Sept. 18 with the collapse of an RPP-NSP coalition under Mr. Ecevit.

The former premier has since been trying to force early elections, apparently in hopes of taking advantage of the popularity he won by sending troops to Cyprus in July.

A meeting of political party leaders convened by Mr. Irmak yesterday failed to reach agreement on an election date. Tarly elections are inevitable. but the only authority that can set an election date is the National Assembly," opposition lead-er Suleyman Demirel said. In another development, Turkey's central bank today an-nounced a devaluation of the Turkish lira against nine West

At the same time, Foreign Minister Melih Esenbel said that a return of Archbishop Makarios to Cyprus would hardly contribute peace on the island. Archbishop Makarios, ousted as president of Cyprus in July by a Greek-led coup to which Turkey reacted by occupying the northern part of the island, plans to return soon to the Greek sector.

"It is the constitutional right of the Greek-Cypriot community to elect its own leader," Mr. Esen-bel said at a news conference. But Archbishop Makarlos has always played the leading role during the incidents of violence and disagreements in Cyprus. The policy which Archbishop Makarios followed caused a deep rift between the two Cypriot communi-ties. Therefore, I don't think the return of Archbishop Makarios will serve peace on the island."

Necessary Measures Mr. Esenbel said that clashes erupt and the lives of Turkish Cypriots are threatened, then the Turkish government will take the necessary measures." He did not elaborate.

Alpasian Turkes, the Cyprus-born leader of Turkey's Nationalist Action part , told newsmen, "The Turkish Republic must announce to the world that it can-not accept Makarios's return to the island. If Makarlos returns to Cyprus, the Turkish armed forces must launch a third offensive and capture the entire island."

Campus violence, which has been under way for three weeks, flared today on the campus of Aegean University, near the port city of Izmir.

Police said rightist and leftist students fought with chains, iron bars and stones. Three students /ere hospitalized with minor injuries before police put an end to the fighting and cordoned off the campus.

Most analysts here expect the country to choose a republic. The three major opposition parties all adamantly oppose the King. Premier Caramanlis, traditionally & royalist, has refused to take a public stand.
One reason is that Mr. Caramanlis's party, the New Democracy, is seriously split on the matter. According to his aides, the Premier also feels that the monarchy issue has bedeviled Greek politics for too long, and should not become the subject of partisan debate.

Reform Proposals Mr. Caramanlis is drafting reform proposals to strengthen the powers of the Premier's office, his aides say. Under this plan, the head of state could be either a president, on the West German model, or a monarch, along Brit-

Unity Appeal To Laborites By Callaghan

LONDON, Nov. 27 (AP) .- Foreign Secretary James Callaghan appealed today to the Labor party's feuding left and right wings for unity behind Prime Minister Harold Wilson's sixweek-old government,

Mr. Callaghan, who is party chairman, was opening Labor's annual party convention, attended by more than 1,300 delegates from the rank and file and from affiliated trade unions.

The convention met amid a continuing dispute over which is boss, the party's national ex-ecutive committee or Labor members of Parliament.

Left-wing members of the Socialist Charter Movement hand-ed leaflets to delegates charging that the government and the parliamentary party were trying to stifle free debate at the convention while the right wing was "intent on destroying any vesti-ge of democracy in the party."

Mr. Wilson's cabinet itself is widely split over the issue of Britain's membership in the European Economic Community, Mr. Callaghan is at present trying to negotiate an easing of Britain's terms of entry into the ninenation community

Last night, Trade Secretary Peter Shore unleashed a violent attack on Britain's membership under any terms and charged that pro-marketeers were swamping the country with false pro-paganda and hiding facts about Britain's position in the community.

Mr. Callaghan, considered to be moderately in favor of continued British membership, made no mention of the Common Market dispute. But he said that Mr. Wilson's administration had been the victim of "unfair abuse" and "mean personal attacks." Party supporters, he said, should give the government a

Vladivostok Accord Is Said To Allow Increase in MIRV

By Murrey Marder and Michael Getler

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (WP). -The proposed U.S.-Soviet accord for "capping" total num-bers of missiles and bombers in each of the two superpowers' arsenals reportedly allows each side to considerably expand the numbers of its multiple warhead missiler

The levels agreed to in Vladi-vostok by President Ford and Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev would permit the Russians far higher numbers of multiple warheads, or MIRVs, than U.S. strategists have desired, administration and congressional sources disclosed yesterday.

As a result, a potentially costly building of existing U.S. multiple warheads is anticipated, to match the high level set for the Soviet Union. This buildup is defended on one side as a justifiable price for "putting a cap" on the arms race, while critics yesterday began to assed the new MIIRV missile ceiling as "astonishingly large." Under the tentative accord, the total celling on each country's strategic nuclear forces, as reported earlier, will be just under 2,500 missiles and bombers. The most critical number in the tentative arms package, however, is unofficially reported to be the about 1,300 missies with MIRVtype multiple warheads to be permitted on each side.

Atomic Warhends MIRV missiles carry several sto ic warheads on a single rocket and can send each warhead to a separate target. Informed sources conceded that the MIRV ceiling was well beyond the level sought by President Ford or his predecessor, Richard Nixon. The 1,300 range was described as almost twice as high as the 600-to-700-missile level Mr. Nixon proposed for the Russlans at a Moscow summit meeting with Mr Brezhnev last June. At that time, a different type of agreement was sought, over a shorter time. What was agreed to by President Ford and Mr. Brezhnev at Viadivostok, administration officials said were the best figures on which the United States could obtain Russian agreement. The numbers are said to be 40 per cent below what the Soviet Union is capable of deploying if there had been no accord.

The impact of the new arms pact, if approved by Congress, would be substantial, Sources said it would force a new top-level study of what kind of nuclear forces the United States should have and would expand defense spending on new types of weap-

For example, a large new 50viet force c. MIRV-equipped landbased ICBMs, which could be fully deployed in six or seven years, would undoubtedly be viewed as a threat to U.S. land-based missiles and thus give impetus to U.S. programs now in the development stage, such as mobile ICBMs that would be carried in transport planes or on truckr It may also give a boost to putting a greater share of the U.S. missiles on submarines, where they are virtually invulnerable to The Pentagon and White House had been planning to expand the Minuteman-3 ICBM force from 550 to 600 starting late next year. Now those plans are uncertain because a review will be made to determine if the United States should put the extra missiles it will be allowed on land, in the air or under the sea.

The United States has 470 Min-uteman-3 ICBMs, each carrying three MIRV warheads, in silos, ready to fire. Another 80 will be installed by next year to bring the number up to the 550 authorized. The rest of the 1,000-missile Minuteman force is made up of 450 single-warhead Minuteman-2

The United States also has 23 operational MIRV-equipped Po-seidon submarines out of 31 planned. Each submarine carri missiles with 10 to 14 war! each. By next year, the U States will have 496 of the siles on 31 Poseidon subma With the Minuteman force will amount to 1,496 MIRV-e ped U.S. missiles with at 6.610 warheads.

But after the 1972 Size Arms Limitation Talks agree expires in 1977, the first American missile-carrying Tr submarine will go into se The Russians, under the interim agreement, are all 2,358 missiles, about 600 than the United States. 1,575 of these missiles curr are land based. was in Tokyo last Friday and Saturday (Nov. 22-23) for the annual consultation with the Japanese foreign minister. Mr. Kissinger was here for the four days before that with President Gerald Ford, and Mr. Kissinger also returned Sunday after being with Mr. Ford in Vladivostok. He met with Japanese Foreign Minister Toshio Kimura Monday and discussed the Japanese-French conference.

According to both French and American officials, the Japanese position has remained consistent, About two weeks ago, the Japa-nese government announced that it officially supports the French position in principle. But as a French diplomat explained, "They support our principles, but do not oppose the American solutions." Japan Vulnerable

All sides claim to recognize the peculiar Japanese vulnerability because it imports over 99 per cent of its oil. "We don't want to cause any ill reactions from the producers," said a Japanese Foreign Ministry official. For that reason the Japanese try to avoid being identified as a leader in a fight against producing countries. They prefer to maintain a low evasive posture and publicly agree "in prin-ciple" with the more conciliatory But at the same time they are hopeful of driving down the high price of oil, which the Americans are intent upon doing. They have joined in other concerted consumer actions, such as the new International Energy Agency. In a Hurry

"We think the French are in too much of a hurry to meet with the producing countries," a Foreign Ministry official said. "We think we need certain agreements among the consumer countries begoing to the negotiating table, but maybe not such clearcut organizations or concrete for-mulas like the Americans proposė."

Foreign Minister Kimura has called the American Droposals a "constructive plan," carefully avoiding any public commitment to join. He explained the vague Japanese position by saying the French and American positions are not so different, at least in The Japanese hope is that practical differences can be solved when President Ford and French Premier Valéry Giscard d'Estaing meet Dec. 15 on the French island of Martinique. Then they can fall in step behind, without being exposed and feeling vulnerable.

Mr. Klasinger's energy policy in-cluding the International Energy Agency, the oil-sharing program for industrial nations, and the $25-Min petrodollar recycling fund.

The rationale for the new U.S. strategy for closing the energy gap stems from the Project Independence report, released two weeks ago by the Federal Energy

That report set forth two basic etterns that would result from either acceptance of an $11 price per barrel of crude oil in the world market or early reduction of the world oil price to $7 a As the FEA data indicate, the rate of growth of domestic production would be much faster at $11 than $7 and there would be a far greater drag on the growth of oll consumption. By 1985, at the $11 price, according to the FRA's study, the expanded supply of oil-plus expanded output of coal and nuclear energy—could eliminate the need for imported

But at the $7 price per barrel of oil, the gap could widen to about 13 million barrels a day, or more than half of all the United States's petroleum needs. The American dependency—and probably foreign dependency as well—on OPEC oil would increase rather than narrow, according to the FEA projections. High-Price Strategy

The startling news broken by Mr. Enders at Yale—startling against the background of repeated declarations of high American officials that OPEC nations must reduce their exorbitantly high prices is that the United States is now basing its strategy on the

This is what, in informal disssion, he called the catch-22 of the U.S. position: It is designed reduce Western dependency foreign oil and ultimately to break the OPEC oil price, but when the oil price comes down, the United States and its partners will hold up their own oil prices to protect high-cost domes-

Thus, as the price for foreign United States and its partners would move toward a two-ties cost structure for energy: "One that assures the consuming countries their desired degree of independence; the other balances a constant demand and growing supply for imported oil at prices that diminished, or even reversed, the accumulation of assets by producers," he said. Other nations, such as France might refuse to go along—and, if the United States and its partners did succeed in driving down the world oil price, the outsiders would have a clear cost advantage in production and competition in world trade Questions can also be raised about the very heavy emphasis on expanding production at high cost. President Ford has thus far backed an essentially "voluntary program of restraining consumption, rejecting proposals even for moderate increases in gasoline Higher Taxes an average price of $11 a barrel for crude oil, the price of a gallon of gasoline in the United States would be 88 cents—far higher than the price at the pump that would result from even a 20-cent rise in the gasoline tax. If the United States did fall behind the President's goal of a reduction of 1 million barrels a day in consumption, he might propose a stiffer plan for cutting Behind the U.S. position on energy, as developed by Mr.

Enders, is the belief that the only way the United States can get a handle on the crisis is via its hiternational dangers—and that is also the only way Americans can be brought to see the urgency And the most paradoxical aspect is that the United States, in fighting to bring down the OPEC price, means to keep its own price high.

Mitchell Admits Not Telling Of Liddy Espionage Projects

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (AP). had told Mr. Haldeman, Ehrlichman, the President or anyone in -During a harsh cross-examination, John Mitchell said today he did not volunteer knowledge of political esplonage proposals for fear that it would hurt Richard Nixon's re-election campaign.

As prosecutor James Neal shot question after question, Mr. Mitchell calmly maintained he did not lie to the grand jury, did not lie to the special Senate Watergate committee, and "had an urge to tell the truth" when questioned by the FBI. "Your urge to tell the truth didn't cause you to tell these agents about three meetings in January, February and March, 1972?" Mr. Neal asked, referring to the bizarre proposal that Mr. Mitchell said he rejected. "I did not volunteer for obvious reasons," Mr. Mitchell

First Fruits of Liberty

Few Americans will be complacent on this Thanksgiving Day of 1974, when, whatever the feast that is spread before them, the price in dollars and cents must haunt them at least a little; when they know that many in their own land and more, many more, in other regions perforce go without. The very abundance of America in a time of global stringency seems a reproach.

Yet it should be a source of gratitude, for without it, and without the skills that went into its creation, where would be the hope of the world today? That the abundance should be used with wisdom and with generosity is a moral obligation upon the Americans, yet surely they need not feel guilt for all that they and their ancestors wrought in making a granary of a wilderness.

For the complexity of the American experience, and for its meaning today, it is worthwhile to turn again to that original feast of Thanksgiving, in Plymouth, more than three and a half centuries ago, when the Pilgrims first arrived in the still new world, to make, as Stephen Vincent Benet once wrote, "a small bustling noise in an empty land." The land was not, fortunately for them, quite empty, nor was it, in William Bradford's phrase, "a hideous and desolate wilderness full of wild beasts and wild men." It was a rude land, with extremes of cold and heat that most Europeans had never experienced, and the Indians who met them represented a culture that was to the immigrants fearsome and strange. But the soll was rich: some Indians taught the newcomers new methods of planting the new Indian corn. and after a bitter winter there was a good harvest.

So they summoned their Indian neighbors, and together gave thanks. In part, it was the ancient feast of first-fruits; in part it was a thought brought over from the Netherlands where the Pilgrims had lived in religious exile: a day of thanksgiving for independence won. So it was a festival of the first fruits of liberty, in a land where the fruits were one day to nourish more than 200 million people, living in liberty, and sharing their abundance with many more.

The massiveness of this achievement should not and will not be allowed to obscure the inequities and wrongs that, along with high idealism and plain hard work, went into its making. The Indians, those who helped the Pilgrims or those who fought against the European invasion, lost their lands and the culture that was built upon their way of life. Slaves were imported from Africa; newcomers were exploited by those who had preceded them; some became wealthy; some lived out lives of poverty and want. Vet these evils flourished eisewhere in the world. often in greater quantity or greater intensity. What was unique in the United States was that with a great measure of human liberty came a great enrichment of the natural wealth of a continent.

And so not only Americans, but those of other nations, can give thanks today, in all humility. For those to whom Thanksgiving is a native feast, there cannot be pride alone, nor need there be guilt alone. The sharing of the feast should not be an act of condescension, but neither should it be one of penance, or self-flagellation. Rather, let it be in the spirit of that first Thanksgiving, when alien peoples met, each bringing what it could to a common table, for a common

U Thant and the UN

U Thant was not the most imaginative Secretary-General of the United Nations but he seemed an indispensable one for most of his unprecedented tenure. When Dag Hammarskjold died in an African plane crash in 1961, the mild and gentle Buddhist from Burma was the only figure on the UN scene on whom all blocs and factions-including the two competing superpowers-could unite. This was no less true when he was unanimously chosen for the full term in 1962 and again when he was drafted for re-election

Universal acceptability did not give Mr. Thant lasting immunity from criticisms of member governments, but it did allow him to go quietly about the business of shoring up an organization in deep crisis. With the United Nations again today in both a constitutional and a moral crisis, provoked by flouting of the rules and manipulation of mindless majorities by the Afro-Arab-Asian alliance, U Thant's genius for compromise and his deft ability to calm embittered relationships are deeply missed. In his subtle way, Mr. Thant might well have been able to head off the worst excesses and dangerous precedents of the current General Assembly majority: the arbitrary suspension of a founding member (South Africa); the curbing of Israel's rights to speak in its own defense against the Arab phalanx, the welcome to the leader of a terrorist organization with the deference normally reserved to a head of state.

Mr. Thant's even-handed conduct persuaded the Soviet Union to shelve its demand for replacing the secretary-general with a "troika"-one representative each for the Soviet bloc, the West and the neutral nations-a revamping that would have completely paralyzed the UN secretariat and administration.

Though never regarded as an activist or innovator who exploited the implied powers of his office in the manner of Mr. Hammarskjold or Trygve Lie, Mr. Thant did take initiatives on his own. Perhaps the most significant was his order to the UN troops in the Congo to use force to crush the Katangan secession. He helped mediate the India-Pakistan clash in Kashmir, then President Kennedy gave credit to his efforts, vis-a-vis both Washington and Moscow, to resolve the Cuban missile crisis in 1962.

Mr. Thant was unable to involve the UN effectively in attempts to settle the Vietnam war and he failed-even as his predecessors and successor have failed-to preside over a UN settlement of the Middle East conflict. Critics said he could have forestalled the Arab-Israeli war of 1967 by playing for time before acceding to Egypt's demand for withdrawal of UN forces from Gaza and Sinai; but Mr. Thant insisted that he had taken every practical step for which he had authority in his effort to head off that

In serving as secretary-general longer than either of his predecessors, Mr. Thant did not succeed in bolstering the United Nations machinery for peace or in reconstructing its swollen and inefficient bureaucracy. He did manage for 10 critical years to keep the UN alive and functioning, and it is doubtful that anyone in that period could have done much more than that

Slaughter in Ethiopia

After carrying out a gradual and bloodless revolution over the past nine months. Ethiopia's young military rulers have shocked the world by abruptly executing 60 former government officials and aristocrats close to the deposed Emperor Haile Selassie. Among the victims were Gen. Aman Michael Andom, who headed the provisional government until last week, and former premier Endalkachew Makkonen, a serious candidate for secretary general of the United Nations only three years ago.

What could have ignited the bestial passions that drove the young officers of the Provisional Military Council to mass slaughter in flagrant violation of their promise of a fair trial for all political prisoners? Was it simply a "mad act by a bunch of frightened men," as the Zambian government newspaper declared? Most of those executed had been in custody for months and appeared to be incapable of challenging the military regime.

Gen. Aman may have been a threat, for he was highly popular with soldiers and peasants alike, and was obviously unwilling to be a figurehead, leaving real power to the shadowy council chairman, Maj. Mengistu Haile Mirlam. When Gen. Aman was removed last week, the council accused him of acting as a dictator and exceeding his mandate. An Eritrean himself, he reportedly refused to order more troops to that volatile province, preferring to try to negotiate with the rebel Eritrean Liberation

In any event, neither the council's differences with Gen, Aman nor the acts of corruption and neglect charged against the other prisoners can explain the killings by military men who hitherto had taken pride in the humane character of their revolution. This act is certain to provoke unrest and eventual retribution in Ethiopia. It will also raise for the Organization of African Unity the question whether to continue making its headquarters in Addis Ababa.

The Ford-Breshnev meeting was merely a holding operation, and

NEW YORK-There are two contradictory interpretations of the Ford-Brezhnev "tentative" agreement on the control of offensive nuclear weapons. The first, defined by the White House press secretary. Ronald Nessen, was that it was a "triumph" for arms control, and the second was that it was a delayed Soviet trap to assure Moscow of U.S. trade and modern technology.

The chances are that it was neither. It was a sudden, vague, and surprising "breakthrough" in principle, as Secretary of State Kissinger called it, and an indication that the leaders of the Soviet Union want to continue their policy of peaceful coexistence with the United States, or at least avoid a break with Washington in the foreseeable future.

In political terms, this is reassuring. The Soviet leaders might have taken a more belligerent line. The Western nations are in serious economic and political trouble. President Ford has not stablished his authority over the United States government, or even organized his new administraion. And from the Azores, through Europe and the Mediterrangan and the Middle East to Japan, the free nations are divided and disorganized.

Détente Supported

At least in the Ford-Brezhnev meeting at Vladivostok, the Soviet leaders didn't try to take advantage of the disarray of the West, but supported the policy of détente with the United States agreed on a long-term control of the numbers of nuclear weapons, avoided arguments over Europe and Japan, and gave at least tentative approval to peace and national independence to all nations in the Middle East, includ-

These are the brutal facts of the situation, and on the big issue of the Middle East, the Vladivostok meeting was no triumph. It kept the balance of nuclear power about where it was. It agreed to maintain that balance for the next 10 years, which is helpful, but on the immediate crisis of the Middle East, it did not use the power of Washington and Moscow to avoid another

It is probably wrong to assume that Brezhnev was setting a trap for Ford, agreeing to a nuclear compromise in principle, merely to get trade and technology agreements through the Congress, but Brezhnev did not really deal with the major crisis in the Middle East. And this is what really worries Washington and the other capitals of the world.

How Kissinger Got SALT Breakthrough

By Victor Zorza

WASHINGTON—The explanation given by President Ford for the SALT breakthrough explains nothing. Why, he was asked, had the Russians agreed to it? "It is my best judgment," he answered, "that they are deeply concerned about the arms race." Of course they are. But why has this concern impelled them now to make the concessions which Mr. Kissinger listed in his Vladivostok press conferenceconcessions which he has tried to extract from them repeatedly for a number of years?

His critics maintain that the concessions really came from Mr. Kissinger, and the debate on SALT-2 will no doubt be as long and as bitter as the debate on SALT-1. The Kremlin, it would appear from his account, has suddenly been converted to the view-which he had been urging on it for years—that both sides were getting too many nuclear weapons, and it promptly decided to agree to a lower ceiling. "I would suppose," he said, that the general secretary [Breshnev] has come to the conclusion that we have: that at whatever level you put the ceiling, it is enough to destroy humanity several times over, so that the actual level of the celling is not as decisive as the fact that a celling has been put on

But this is what the whole SALT negotiation has been about. The Kremlin is not in the habit of suddenly reversing itself after a blinding revelation, any more than the White House is. An attempt to deduce a more satisfactory explanation must be based on some of Mr. Kissinger's other remarks. The Soviet leaders, he said, were now dealing "with a new President." He believed that this may have influenced their decisions. "because it created a longer political stability."

What this unlovely phrase means is that Mr. Ford will be a candidate in 1976, with a good chance to stay on in the White House until 1980, thus keeping Sen. Jackson out of it. He won't be a lame duck, as Mr. Nixon would have been if he had survived Watergate. Indeed, it looks as if the Vladivostok agreement is based on a tacit understanding between the White House and the Kremlin to keep Jackson at bay and to help re-elect Kissinger's critics would view it as an unscrupulous political ploy in much the same way as they viewed his travels to Peking and Moscow and his Vietnam peace negotiations, which they saw as part of Mr. Nixon's re-election campaign. Kissinger's admirers will say that if the only way to get SALT-2 is by re-electing Jerry Ford, then so be it.

The clue to Moscow's own attitude is to be found in the close attention which the Soviet press has given to every White House statement about Mr. Ford's 1976 intentions, from the first coy

Nor did he need to press point, for the Kremlin had i up Jackson into so big 2 bo with constant press attacks him as the man who was a to bring the cold war back, it came to believe its own p aganda. What Kissinger its do was to show the Kremin to avert the threat that Jack might become president-sac he did become president after how he might dismentle SALT-2 agreement.

Dual Sovereignty for Jerusalem

By Lord Caradon

LONDON,—When we unanimously passed Security Council Resolution 242 in November. 1967, we made no direct reference to Jerusalem, Better, we UN delegates thought, to state the overriding purposes first. But in-creasingly it has become clear that without a settlement in Jerusalem there will never be peace.

Everything else depends on Jerusalem. The Holy City is as important as it is unique. If there is no settlement in Jerusalem, Secretary of State Kissinger need fly to the Middle East no more, the Geneva Conference need not meet again. For to ignore or postpone the status of Jerusalem is to deceive.

A new conception of the future of Jerusalem can be simply stat-

The idea gaining ground is that there should be sister cities in an undivided Jerusalem, an Arab Jerusalem under Arab administration and Arab sovereignty on one side, and an Israeli Jerusalem under Israeli administration and Israeli sovereignty on the other, with freedom of movement and communication between the two a settlement based on freedom, equality, mutual respect and peaceful coexistence, creating a new relationship of trust and co-operation between the Israelis and the Arabs, a new Jerusalem to bring about a lasting peace.

Bringing Together

A free Jerusalem bringing people together instead of holding Senate and UN debates. It is them apart, enabling them to cooperate in matters of joint concern-what a prize that would be! What a blessing for everyone! Jerusalem as the center of peace and freedom-that would My husband disappeared April be the greatest triumph of international endeavor. When I was writing about this proposal after my last visit to Jerusalem, my friend Arthur Goldberg, who sat beside me as U.S. delegate in the Security Council for several years, wondered if my proposal for equal dual sovereignty in an undivided Jerusalem might lead to separation on "the model of Berlin."

But, in reply, I gave my testimony from two visits to Jerusalem, and to both sides of the Jordan. Everyone I met, both Arab and Israeli, is agreed that whatever else happens there should never again be barriers in Jerusalem. There is no intention on either side to go back to the old armed confrontation. That is what makes the proposal for equality in an undivided city both possible and practical. I have often said when I have been speaking in the Arab towns and villages of the West Bank that if anyone tries to erect barriers again in Jerusalem I should like to come with my own hands to help tear them down. But, as I say, I find on both sides agreement at least on this, a deep desire to have an undivided city.

What is the international in-

It was long ago proposed in the United Nations that Jerusalem should be an internationally governed city. That might have been possible at one time. It is not now. The Arabs would not accept it and the Israelis certainly would not. And anyhow it will be far better, I am sure, for the Arabs to administer the Arab area and Arab population,

Mice's Inability

The inability of the mice's de-fenses to attack the cancer, therefore, was due to samething happening around the cancer cells, rather than to a total breakdown of the immune system, the French scientists said.
Indeed, they found that the cancer cells were able to resist an increased buildup of the white blood cells that are the key part of the defense system.

In laboratory dishes, the researchers found that the macrophages that usually envelop for-eign objects stayed away from the cancer cells.

Moreover, despite the increased immune response, the scientists failed to find any signs of inflammation. This familiar reaction, which normally accompanies the body's attempts to ward off foreign objects with its immune defenses, shows up as the fever that accompanies illness or the redness around a sore.

Other tests showed that the malignant cells release a substance that stops this inflammatory response, the scientists reported.

The absence of inflammatory reactions in tumor tissues is indeed remarkable," the French scientists said.

Why do you think 947 foreign companies set up in Belgium last year?

Since Brussels became capital of the Common Market, more and more foreign companies have been making their headquarters in Belgium.

Manufacturers, international banks, food companies, property developers... they're all coming. Why?

First, because Brussels is increasingly the central point of contact and the information bank for the new Europe. If you need facts or you need to meet key people, the place to find them is Belgium

This means that if you're planning a business trip to Europe, the logical point of entry is Brussels. And the logical way of getting there is, naturally, the airline that knows Brussels best. Sabena.

Apart from the traditional Belgian hospitality which you will enjoy aboard our new wide-bodied Boeing 707's, 737's, 747's and Mc Donnell Douglas DC-10's, Sabena can offer you a unique commercial intelligence service - not just for Belgium but for most countries where you're likely to do business.

WASHINGTON—The U.S. State Department has stepped in to help reunite a young American oman with her husband a Latvian athlete who has been barred from leaving his home in the Soviet Union.

Included on the list are 16 individuals who have been recognized as U.S. citizens, parents separated from their children and husbands and wives who have been barred from emigration by the Soviet government.

Despite the general improvement in relations between Moscow and Washington, the number of humanitarian cases awaiting action by the Kremlin has remained the same for many years.

The Soviet government closes some cases each year by allowing individuals to emigrate but new cases are added just as fast. The Soviets seem to act more quickly on newer cases than on the old.

Three weeks ago, the Soviets reportedly granted permission for Eleanora lechepene to leave Lithuania 30 years after she first applied for an exit visa. Born in as a child to Lithuania when it was an independent country before World War II.

Her brother, John Atkash, said Monday he had not yet heard when Mrs. Iechepene would actually leave the Soviet Union. Her case was the oldest on the representation list.

Less Than a Year By contrast, Simas Kudirka, a

Lithuanian seaman who had been in a prison camp after trying to defect from a Soviet fishing vessel in 1970, came to the United States earlier this month, less than a year after his claim to U.S. citizenship was recognized.

The case of Mrs. Donins illustrates the problems generated by the rapidly increasing number of marriages between U.S. and Soviet citizens.

Most of the rising number of East-West romances stem from the increased number of American students and tourists visiting

> "We expect to see 40 or 50 marriages this year compared with 25 or 30 last year," a State Department official said

> There are 15 cases pending, five men and 10 women, in which the Soviets have refused permission for their citizens to join American spouses. There are many other cases where a spouse has applied for permission to leave and has yet to receive an answer.

The Grounds

Mrs. Donins waited several weeks to call for official as tance while her husband waited for the government to decide his

"The grounds for his denial are based on the fact that my husband, figuratively speaking, is an officer in the Soviet Army," she said "Janis is a track and field athlete, a javelin thrower and one of the Soviet Union's best. of an officer in the Soviet Army and was paid by them.
"This is the extent of his military experience and knowledge. He never trained as a soldier. was never on active service and never had access to military

Mrs Donins met her husband in 1969 when she was a student the University of Southern California and he was visiting Los Angeles with the Soviet track team. They corresponded and met more times and in January, 1972, were married in Riga.

'Miserable' Life

"We decided to live in the Soviet Union to protect my husband's relatives from harassment and mistreatment they would receive if we chose to leave," she continued. "Our efforts were to no avail and Soviet officials made life completely miserable for us

"Unable to stand it any longer, and realizing our only hope for living a normal life lay in com-ing to the United States to live, I left the Soviet Union with my daughter in 1974." In recent years, young Soviet citizens who have married Americans have been able to leave the country about six months after the wedding.

Simas Kudirka . . Lithuanian seaman.

There have been cases where it took more than a year, however. "The Soviets try to prevent the marriages but once a person gets permission and goes through the ceremony he is likely to get out," an official explained.

When a Soviet citizen applies to marry a foreigner, he is likely to be fired from his job and his family will be harassed. Parents have been expelled from the Communist party and demoted from their jobs when their child became engaged to a foreigner.

Foreigners have been expelled and parred from returning to the country, thus preventing planned marriages. This pressure has been successful in ending some romances and in one recent case caused a woman to withdraw her application to join her American husband.

In another recent case, a Russian woman left her husband 24 hours after arriving in the United States, telling him she had gone through the ceremony only as a way of getting out of her home-

An Emerging Issue

Fighting Sexism in U.S. Schools

OLD WESTBURY, N.Y. ONYT). "They have so isw re-sources. And once they're saddled with a child, it's all over. Their lives are ended," said Isabel Byron, who teaches English and women's studies at a minority high school in New York.

"By the time they're 3. little girls in mursery school are already quite well aware of what they're supposed to be. They're stuck in the doll corner doing repetitive house chores And they also know that what the boys do is going to be fifferent—and superior," Seims Greenberg a specialist in early childhood education who teaches at Hofstra University.

And in the classroom, she added, "no one considers it insp-propriate behavior that the girls are passive and unassertive, But these girls are the ones who fall apart at 35."

"In our town, when a boy grad-uates from high school, he can get a job at the paper mill and earn $10,000 a year," said Yolanda Bulley, a fourth-grade teacher from Millinocket, Maine, "But there is nothing happening in the chool to show a young female that her only options don't have to be punching a cash register in the five-and-ten for 40 bucks a week or waiting on tables." What these women were talking about were the effects of sexism in schools. They also call it sex-stereotyping in education. Or sex-role orientation. But by any name, it means the same thing, the influencing of children, through the educational process, to see themselves in certain stereotypical ways that often nar-row their present behavior and limit their aspirations for the Office of Education. "Almost nothing was happening then," said Florence Howe, president of the Feminist Press. "All that was, you could list on a few scraps of paper. Now, with a staff of 18 people, the press can hardly handle its mail and phone calls on the subject."

A Warning But Jacqueline Clement, assistant superintendent of schools in Hanover, N.H., and one of the few educational administrators attending the conference, warned against too much optimism. "Ninety per cent of the supervisors and teachers in the country have no idea of what we're talking about You're not dealing with people who have any awareness of the issue—except as a joke. And it's hard to change teachers' and administrators' attitudes, because most of them are traditional people in a traditional profession. You don't know many swinging superintendents of school systems, do you?"

Shirley McCune, director of the Resource Center on Sex Roles and Education in Washington, D.C., tended to agree. She saw the movement as still fragmentary and very much grass-roots, with most of what is happening coming from the bottom and fil-

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AF-DJ) .- Securities trading has not been as disastrous for brokers as it has been depicted over the past few years, a study by the industry's major trade group

The Securities Industry Association survey discloses that the pretax earnings of the average broker dealing with the general public—the retail salesman—rose 36 per cent last year to $18,500 from $13,600 in 1970, the date of the trade group's previous study. The findings of the latest survey, contained in a 58-page confidential report, were obtained from an industry

The report says earnings of managers of bro-kerage firm branch offices and salesmen dealing with financial institutions also rose about the same rate as their retail colleagues—37 per cent—during that span. But, the study shows, those two types earn roughly twice as much as the typical broker. The average branch manager and institutional salesman each earned $37,000 in 1973, compared with $27,000 three years earlier.

The earnings gains for all three categories more than offset the rise in the cost of living during that period. The Labor Department's consumer price index stood at 133.1 at the end of 1973, up 10 per cent from 1163 at the end of 1970.

Ironically, the results are being sent to the 80 brokerage firms that participated in the study at a time when the industry is complaining of financial woes in an effort to stave off the imposition next May 1 of fully negotiated brokerage rates as mandated by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The longer-range objective, chairman Lynn Townsend says, is to spash costs to a point where the break-even volume will be 300,000 vehicles below the current level. While the company will not say what that level is, 300,000 units would represent nearly 10 per cent of 1973s record 3.4 million vehicles built by Chrysler

Last week, for example, according to the Commerce Department, retail sales rose 2 per cent from the like week a year earlier. Since inflation had pushed prices up about 12 per cent in that year, the actual volume of sales had obviously declined. Among the reasons for the decline:

 Inflation hurts in more ways than one - Not only are generalmerchandise prices up, but so are ving, the traditional opening prices of food and fuel, the basic buy before they think about gift terans Day and Election Day and Iran so far have focused on possible joint construction of a $2-billion oil refinery in Iran and on long-term assurances of Iranign crude oil supplies for Shell. Two smaller American oil companies are involved in the negotiations. They are Crown Central Petroleum Corp. of Baltimore and Apco Oil Corp. of Oklahoma

A Shell spokesman confirmed the broad outline of the negotiations, but stressed that no firm commitments had been made.

Shell and other major oil companies have been seeking addi-tional sources of crude oil since traditional supplies in the Middle East were disrupted late last year and early this year by the Arab oil embargo, and following the recent wave of nationalizations by oil-rich nations.

The Mideast countries, on the other hand, have shown interest in developing new refining facilities and in establishing marketing outlets to insure sales of their refined products in the industrialized world. Shell imports about one-third of its crude oil, mostly from Canada and Venezuela, with small amounts from Iran and other Middle East countries.

Oil industry sources said current discussions about Iran's entry into America's retail gasoline markets revolved around creation of a new marketing company. It would be jointly owned by Shell and National Iranian Oli Co. and would control Shell's East Coast stations Abbas Ghaffari, the U.S. representative for National Iranian Oil Co., said a decision on the proposed refinery in Iran, which would have a capacity of 500,000 barrels a day, should be reached late this year or early next year. He said plans called for a 15year crude oil commitment for the refinery. He also said Iran would be entitled to more than that Shell would be the next largest participant. Mr. Ghaffari said no decision had been reached regarding the prospective Iranian investment in service stations. "We are in a deep study of this," he said, "but the first thing is to see if we're going to build the refinery."

If you bank with the Midland, you're in business in Europe.

The idea is, start in Britain and work your way around to the rest of the Continent.
Which is not a new idea, but now that Britain is in the Common Market, it's a better one.

Particularly if you consider it from the point of view of your European banking requirements.

Midland Bank can handle everything for you.

EBIC. The other European

Economic Community.

Midland a great British bank is also a participant in European Banks International (EBIC), a group of 7 of the great banks of Europe with almost 9,000 branches.

So when you start to do business in Europe you won't have to go through the tortuous discussions and the usual yards of red tape that are normally required to make arrangements with different banks in different countries.

Midland and other banks participating in EBIC act like one bank. At a moment's notice you'll be able to arrange complete full service banking facilities on a local basis at any one of the branches of the EBIC Banks.

Fast money.

It also gives you a means of moving money around at the speed of a telex machine.

Arrange the money through any branch of the Midland in Britain and it can be made available for you to draw on immediately wherever you want it in Europe.

The Midland in Britain.

In Britain, Midland Bank Group is as powerful a banking group as you can get. Wherever you are you can expect to find us in the neighbourhood because with over 3,200 branches in the United Kingdom there are very few neighbourhoods we aren't in.

And the branch near you won't be just a handy place to cash a cheque in.

In fact, your Midland Branch will offer you a range of financial services you wouldn't ordinarily expect to get from a bank because Midland Bank provides much more than ordinary bank services.

For instance we are a finance company, a leasing company, a factoring company, a merchant bank and a world famous travel agency. (The Thomas Cook Group Ltd.) And because of this diverse range of

And because of this diverse range of business interests you'll find us a lot more flexible over things that involve money than a bank that's just a bank.

The things we do for business.

For a start if what you want is some capital to work with, we'll lend you a hand on a short, medium or long term basis.

If you have to acquire some capital

If you have to acquire some capital equipment and you want to get more for your money, you'll be interested to know that we can arrange for you to lease anything from office equipment to an xecutive iet.

if you're a little concerned about cash flow and the problems of extending credit in a country you've never done business in before, don't worry.

We can offer factoring and invoice discount facilities as well as provide you with credit insurance and give you status reports on any company in the country. If you're setting up with a view to going public in the future you can keep it private because you won't have to go outside the Midland Group to arrange it. We can handle your share issue, advise you on mergers and takeovers and offer you the full range of merchant bank

once you're operating in Britain and before you spread out to the rest of Europe we'll give you economic assessments of countries, reviews of markets and commodities, advice on methods of payment and access to a special trade register containing thousands of our company contacts in every branch of trade and industry.

To sum up, before you make a move anywhere in Europe we suggest you do one thing now – get in touch with us.

Midland Bank international Division

We'd like to send you a 32 page booklet that in general terms tells you all you need to know about setting up in Britain. To get your copy write to Mr. F. O. Dunphy, Midland Bank, Room 50, 60 Gracechurch Street, London EC3P 3BN, England.

BILLION DOLLAR BABY

· By Bob Greene. Illustrated. Atheneum. 364 pp. $10.

AT first it's intriguing. Here's the Alice Cooper rock 'n' roll group- proud to claim the title of "the sickest, most degenerate band in America"—starring 2 young man from Arizona who turns his teen-age audiences on by chopping up blood-spilling dolls while singing a number called "Dead Babies," fondling a boa constrictor to the tune of Sick Things," and literally spitting on the frenzied fans who crowd and crush each other at the footlights of his performances. And here's Bob Greene, a 27-year-old columnist for the Chicago Sun-Times who's been given this chance to perform on a Christmas tour with the Alice Cooper troupe and indulge his fantasy of becoming a rock 'n' roll star. Some fun huh? A slightly worm-eaten but otherwise fresh page from the notebooks of George Plimpton. An entertaining chance to see how the rock 'n' roll business really

Then it gets downright amus-ing. Mr. Greene turns out to be a very good reporter, painting in simple primary colors one decep-tively innocent scene after another. Alice Cooper-despite his carefully manufactured image as the monster the parents of teenage America love to hate—is revealed as a witty but mildmannered prototype of the successful kid next door. His real name is Vince Furnier, he's the son of an Arizona Fundamentalist, he was popular in high school, and he likes to play golf. He never touches drugs, he's loath to kill so much as a cockroach, he likes gray-flannel suits, and he regards his success as a horror with wry amusement. So "Billion Dollar Baby" is a study of the put-on, right? An anatomy of the principle that any publicity is good publicity, so long as the names are spelled correctly.

Then it begins to get disturbing. Though business is business and there's no connection between the image and reality. strange things begin to happen. The members of the band grow bored with their dull routine and fall to bickering over Alice's growing superstar status. At the height of the 1973 energy crisis while many Americans are waiting in line for a tankful of gas, the 30 members of the Alica Cooper troupe lounge around their chartered superjet, watching pornographic movies and complaining over the slightest delay.

He could sit do and talk with anybody-even he didn't like them, he ca talk to them. He'd probably extremely charming.

At last Mr. Greene shows another member of the ba acting out his deeper impuls and what that member of t band does is this: he gets drur goes berserk, and smashes sor $4,000 worth of a motel in Utic N. ## BRIDGE.

By Alan Truscol

Some of the best bridge at the recent European championships in Tel Aviv was played in a women's match between Italy and Sweden

On the diagramed deal, North and South were Marisa d'Andrea and Luciana Capodana, making an impressive debut on the Italian team. Their Blue Team club system propelled them into an optimistic game. One club showed a strong hand, and the one-spade response promised either three kings, or an ace and a king

The partnership was now committed to game and, as both players held minimum values, the final three no-trump contract was shaky. But since West has the spade ace and both opposing major suits split four-four, the game is not easy to defeat

The Swedish West, Gunilla Linton, did not consider a dia-mond lead, although as it happens that would have done no harm. She had to choose between an attacking lead in spades, a passive lead in hearts, or a sequence lead in clubs. The books suggest that Q J Q 10 x is both constructive and safe, but the sequel showed that the books are sometimes wrong. The opening lead was the club jack, the right lead in the partnership style rather than the standard queen. Mrs. Capodana won with the king and returned the club seven. This was covered by the ten and ace and a

West knew that South had a red ace, and it was presumably the diamond ace in view of # failure to attack that suit in mediately. She would have give a lot to be able to give her parner the spade ace, but as it we she had to hope that her par ner held ace-queen of hear together with the ten or a five card suit. She shifted to hear but south's ten held up on the third round and she had nit tricks.

Notice that if West had ma the "safe" lead of a heart, ti contract would have succeeds unless East had shifted imm diately to spades, a play the would be difficult to find. The only lead guaranteed to defet the game would be the unsal lead of a spade from A Q I However, if North had been declarer, the lead from A Q xx b East would be the only one allow the game to be made.

going to persevere with their annual charade, maybe they ought to play by the rules the way the undergraduates are supposed to. When the Western Conference pledged its troth to the Pasadena promoters shortly after World War II, it was provided that no Big 10 team would make the trip two years in succession, even if this sometimes rendered the best team in the conference ineligible. However, postsesson competitions lose their cultural value if the team gets whipped, so that condition was soon expunged. The assignment was to go automatically to the conference champion, and if two or more tied for the title the athletic directors would pick the one that had gone to the bowl least recently.

Two years ago, Ohio State went West as the champion and got smashed. A year ago. Michigan tied Ohio State in the standing and on the field but the Michigan quarterback was hurt. Afraid of another licking.

the athletic directors chose Ohio State. Lost Saturday, one Ohio State player, a fieldgoal kicker from Czechoslovakia, beat Michigan 12-10. Once again the teams finished with identical won-lost records, and once again Ohio State got the votes.

Redneck politicians in state assemblies could take log-rolling lessons from the men who mold young character in Middle America No more appetizing than their performance is the fact that the athletic directors keep the vote secret, as though they were ashamed of something. If they aren't, maybe they should be.

"The way I hear it," Benny Friedman said yesterday, "there was one vote for Michigan

"Why didn't you guys go to the Rose he was Michigan's captain and All-American quarterback, Michigan won all its conference games and Friedman-to-Benny Oosterbaan was the most famous passing combination in the world. With such an attraction in Arroyo Seco, Pasadena boosters could have sold cemetery plots to dead men.

"The Big 10 had a rule against postsesson play," Friedman said. "We had an eightgame season that ended around Thanksgiving. Today they play 11 games and go to a bowl. Why? For money?"

Mention of gold turned the luncheon conversation into another channel Recently Edward Andrews, president of the University of Vermont, said he would recommend that the college drop football because the game was costing $277,000 a year. Up went a motel sign near the campus:

"No football at UVM. No snow in Vermont Unthinkable." Trouble is, no money in the till is not unthinkable, and although Vermont has been playing the game since 1897, Vermont doesn't play it well and there is small doubt that the trustees will go along with Andrew. If they do, Vermont will be the first state university to give up the struggle. Unless some kind of help is forthcoming, it will not be the last.

NFL Participation

Where could colleges find financial support for their athletic programs? Well, there are thousands of corporations and foundations in this country that endow scholar-ships or make gifts in other form to help develop the physicists, chemists and geologists they will need tomorrow. If American Can and the Nabisco Foundation deem this a wise investment, shouldn't self-interest suggest something to the National Football League?

Owners of professional baseball clubs are not noted for philanthropy, yet baseball has supported its own farm system for a century. Professional football and basketball are practicing parasites fed by the colleges. It has been suggested that if the function of a college is to prepare students for postgraduate life, then perhaps a school can fulfill its purpose by teaching young men how to be linebackers for the Dallas Cow-boys. And if that is so, perhaps it is time the Cowboys bankrolled a few scholarships.

If Football dies at Vermont, can it survive the University of Massachusetts (beaten this year by UVM)? It is from colleges like UMass that the pros get wide receivers like

NFL Action: Broncos-Lions, Redskins-Cowboys

NEW YORK, NOV. 27 (NYT).-The National Football League has had a proprietary interest in Thanksgiving Day for more than 40 years, utilizing the holiday as an occasion to put its wares on display. There will be two games tomorrow, Denver at Detroit and Washington at Dallas.

Providence lost Maryin Barnes and Kevin Stacom, but coach Dave Gavitt recruited Bob Misevicius and Bruce Campbell, both 6-9. They will go well with Bill Esson, a freshman, and hold-overs Joe Hassett and Bob Cooper.

SOUTH

Maryland, North Carolina and Clemson have powerful teams. Alabama is the choice in the Southeastern Conference; Kentucky came away No. 1 in national recruiting; Tennessee has outstanding scorers, and Auburn is the sleeper.

Furman is in a class by itself in the Southern Conference, and Middle Tennessee is the Ohio Valley favorite. South Carolina, Memphis State and Morgan State are the top independents.

North Carolina State lost Tommy Burleson, the 7-4 center, from its starting five Either Phil Spence, 6-8, or 6-7 freshman Kenny Carr will play center, Thompson is around to make the opposition cringe, Monte Towe backcourt, and Phil Stoddard, a 6-7, 230-pound, mobile strongman is the other forward

Loss to the Pro Ranks Maryland will have a tough time getting over the loss of Moses Malone to the pro ranks. The Terps will now doublepost Tom Roy, 6-9, and Owen Brown, 6-8, but the big name of the front court will probably be Steve Sheppard, 6-6. The Terps have one of the nation's finest guards in John Lucas and two quality freshmen in Chris Patton, 6-9, and Brad Davis.

At North Carolina, coach Dean Smith has Mitch Kupchak, 6-9, and Ed Stahl, 6-10, to work inside and the flashy 6-4 Walt Davis and Ray Harris in the backcourt. They were all starters on 22-6 team. Only Booby Jones gone, but Tom Lagarde, 6-9, will fill the center spot.

Clemson had its first winning season (14-12) in seven years, and now the Tigers will show their stripes. The big name is Wayne Rollins, a 7-foot center who averaged 124 points, 122 rebounds and blocked 106 shots as a freshman, Additionally, coach Tates Locke grabbed up some top recruits in Skip Wise, Stan Rome, Jim Howell and Colon Abraham Rome will work in with Wayne Croft, 6-8, in the front line and Wise with Van Gregg in the back-to figure, Alabama lost only Ray Odums from its top seven players, who finished 22-4 and shared the title with Vanderbilt. Charles Cleveland, a 171 scorer, 6-10 Leon Douglas (15.2) and T.R. Dunn are the returning standouts. Charles Russell and Rickey Brown will work into the front line some-Kentucky failed to win the SEC title for the first time in seven years as Joe Hall replaced Adolph Rapp as coach. The Wildcats' major problem in finishing 13-13 was lack of a hig man. Hall solved this with Mike Phillips and Rick Robey, both 6-11, and Danny Hall, 6-10. Jack Givens, 6-5, and James Lee, 6-6, were recruited from nearby Lexington. The five freshmen will bolster returning standouts Kevin McGrevey, whose 21.9 average led the SEC scorers, Jimmy Dan Connor, Bob Guyette and Mike Flynn. Ray Mears, the Tennessee coach, again went to New York City for scoring talent and came away with Bernard King, a 6-5, 200-pounder, who averaged 26 points and 25 rebounds. He will team with Ernie Grunfeld, another New Yorker who was the Vols leading scorer with a 17.4

The Grunfeld-King combination would get its biggest boost if Bob Brykalski, a 7-foot, 250pound sophomore Redshirt, and Decastra Webster, a 7-foot freshman, can replace Len Komalski and Wayne Tomlinson.

Florida has six of its first seven players back, including 6-3, 230pound Chip Williams, a 20.6 scorer and 111 rebounder. The other Gator standout is Gene Shy, who averaged 17.8. At Auburn, coach Bob Davis hit the recruiting jackpot with Mike Mitchell, 6-8, Miles Patrick, 6-7, and Krivacs, all from the mos wanted list. They will fit well with Eddie Johnson and Pepto Bolden, who led the SEC in scoring and rebounding, respectively Fesser Leonard and Clyde

South Carolina has had six seasons of 20-plus victories, but the Gamecocks never get very far in post-season tournaments The 6-9 Tom Boswell, who averaged 24 points and 17 rebounds at South Carolina State

Boswell will team with Alexander English, the graceful 6-8 forward, and Bob Mathias, the 6-7 strongman, for a powerful front line. The back court is good too with Nate Davis, Mark Greiner, Mike Dimleavy and the highly regarded 6-2

Morgan State has moved major competition and will make a lot of noise because of Marvin Webster, 6-11, who may be the best senior big man.

Wayne Yates, Memphis State's new coach, will enter with a roar. Cook and Dexter Reed averaged 34.6 points and six assists between them. Yates, who had been Gene Bartow's assis tant before he went off to Illinois, won the recruiting race for Marion Hillard, 6-9, from Copia-Lincoln (Miss.) J.C., and 6-9 John Gunn, the South's No. 1 explaining Thanksgiving to the French which Mr. Buchwald wrote in 1893, when he was 6 years old.) As has been our custom through the age- we always honor Thanksgiving Day by explaining it to the French people, who, through no fault of their own, have no holiday to compare

One of our most important holidays is Thanksgiving Day, known in France as Le Jour de

Merci Donnant. Le Jour de Merci Donnant was first started by a group of pilerims (pelerins) who fled L'Anglefrom terre before the McCarran Act to found a colony Buchwald in the New World (Le Nouveau Monde) where they could shoot Indians (les Peaux-Rouges) and eat turkey (dinde) to their heart's content. They landed at a place called Plymouth (now a famous voiture américaine) in a wooden sailing ship called the Mayflower (or Fleur de Mai) in 1620. But while the pelerins were killing the dindes, the peaux-rouges were killing the pelerins, and there were several hard winters ahead for both of them. The only way the peaux-rouges helped the pelerins was when they taught them to grow corn (mais). The reason they did this was because they liked corn with their pèle-

In 1623, after another harsh year, the pelerins' crops were so good that they decided to have a celebration and give thanks because more mais was raised by the pelerins than pelerins were killed by peaux-rouges.

Every year on the Jour de Merci Donnant, parents tell their children an amusing story about the first celebration

It concerns a brave capitaine named Miles Standish (known in France as Kilomètres Deboutish) and a young, shy heutenant named Jean Alden. Both of them were in love with a flower of Plymouth called Priscilla Mullens (no translation). The vieux capitaine said to the jeune lieute-

"Go to the damsel Priscilla

(allez très vite chez Priscilla). the loveliest maiden of Plymouth (la plus jolie demoiselle de Phymouth). Say that a blunt old captain, a man not of words but of action (un vieux Fanjan la Tulipe), offers his hand and his heart, the hand and heart of a soldier. Not in these words, you know, but this, in short, is my

"I am a maker of war (ie suit un jabricant de la guerre) and not a maker of phrases. You, bred as a scholar (vous, qui êtes pain comme un étudiant), can say it in elegant language, such as you read in your books of the pleadings and wooings of lovers. such as you think best adapted to win the heart of the maiden."

Although Jean was fit to be tied (convenable à être emballé), friendship prevailed over love and he went to his duty. But instead of using elegant language he blurted out his mission. Priscilla was muted with amazement and sorrow (rendue muette par l'étonnement et la tristesse.) At length she exclaimed, interrupting the ominous silence: "If the great captain of Plymouth is so very eager to wed me, why does he not come himself and take the trouble to woo me?" (Ou est-il, le vieux Kilomètres? Pourquoi ne vient-il pas auprès de moi pour tenter sa chance?) * * *

Jean said that Kilomètres Deboutish was very busy and didn't have time for those things. He staggered on, telling what a wonderful husband Kilomètres would make. Finally Priscilla arched her eyebrows and said in a tremulous voice: "Why don't you speak for yourself, Jean?" (A chacun son goût.)

And so, on the fourth Thursday in November, American familles sit down at a large table brimming with tasty dishes, and for the only time during the year eat better than the French do. . . .

No one can deny that Le Jour de Merci Donnant is a grand fête and no matter how well-fed American families are, they never forget to give thanks to Kilometres Deboutish, who made this great day possible.

Duncan's Farewell to Picasso with the manufacture of the Picasso with the

By Amei Wallach

NEW YORK—Especially in his later years, Pablo Picasso was among the most photographed of men. He was an institution, a world force, the man who changed the way we look at painting-and subject matter worthy of any photographer. So they all shot him, working with intense concentration, clowning, preening, presiding over that so-European, comfortable, cluttered world of his.

In the '30s, David Seymour photographed Picasso painting "Guernica," a statement on the horrors of war, which is at Manhattan's Museum of Modern Art, and which some critics think to be the master's very finest painting. In the '40s, Robert Caps rushed to photograph Picasso in his studio as soon as Capa got to liberated Paris.

But it was David Douglas Duncan who made Picasso his own personal subject in the 1950s, when he published his first Picasso book, "The World of Picasso," to be followed in 1962 by "Picasso's Picassos," an inside view of the painter's private collection that made the best-seller list in the United States.

Favorite Subject

Now we have a new decade and a new Duncan book on his favorite subject. "Goodbye Picasso" (Grossett & Dunlap, $35) is somewhat different from the others, however, because it is a book that is as much about David Douglas Duncan as it is about Picasso, who died April 8, 1973. Not one of the photographs is of Duncan. But he is there nevertheless in a distinctive narrator's voice.

Duncan has been a photographer since 1938. He covered World War II, then worked for Life as one of its top men, covering the Soviet Army takeover of Bulgaria, riots in India-great events of that time. But his career as a star, top-of-the-heap photographer really began with the Korean War, which he photographed before anyone else because he was in Japan on assignment when it started. Those photographs won most of the important photography prizes, and resulted in his first book, "This Is War!" Two years ago, they became an important part of his one-man show at the Whitney Museum, the first such show the museum had ever given a photographer. There have been other books, on the Kremlin treasures, on the 1968 presidential conventions and on his favorite prismatic camera techniques. But it is Picasso whom most people, especially the people Duncan cares most to reach, are apt to remember him for. And those are the people in his hometown in Missouri. They're people who are with him in his head and in his camera all the time even at the far-from-Missouri Plaza Hotel, where he sat in the nearly deserted Palm Court one recent morning and talked about

"Look," he said, almost beligerent, he wanted so much to be under-"My home was Kansas City, strictly Midwest. My involvement didn't include people like Pablo Picasso, I'll tell you. There's a fine museum there, but in my family circle there wasn't anybody who would have cared about Pablo Picasso. They care now. Because of me. They care because I've made him real in Midwest terms. It's as simple as that."

"It's as simple as that," is one of Duncan's favorite expressions. In photographic terms it means reducing things to absolute essentials, to a purity of statement that remains uncluttered with any extra

That's a photographer's photograph," he said, pointing to one that contained two strong masses: Picasso's back and a Picasso plate. "Of all the thousands I've taken of him, this is one of the two or three I'd want to say, 'This is my photograph of Picasso.' It was my life that supplied that element. In other photographs it was usually Picasso who did. That's what we live by, a process of elimination, simplicity."

And again, when a reporter selecting pictures for possible reproduction rejected one of Picasso at his easel because it was too predictable, Duncan disagreed. "In one picture, you've reduced Picasso to one line," he said. "This man is so convoluted, but the genesis is all there. The purity of the line. Look at the hand. This is not fist. This is the hand of the creator, not unlike Michelangelo's God." When Duncan is writing, however, "It's as simple as that" sometimes translates itself into gee-whiz adoration for a man for whom he was, as he says in the foreword, "a more-than-son."

Duncan invested Picasso with every virtue that he thought a man should have: "The happiest house on earth," "simplicity," "fantasy." Some of what he records as virtues are questionable: that Picasso and his mistress (later wife) Jacqueline mirrored every emotion Picasso ever had, or that Picasso never talked about himself, only about his guests.

But then, Picaeso already was an institution when Duncan met him on Peb. 3, 1956. "Every day was Christmas," Duncan wrote, and Picasso was accustomed to receiving gifts from well-wishers. Duncan brought him a ring with an ancient carving on it that resembled a Picasso rooster and also a message from their mutual friend Robert Capa, who had been killed in Indochina.

The two offerings won Duncan an invitation to Picasso's home, then upstairs to the bathroom, where the master received his visitor while Jacqueline continued scrubbing his back. It was a beginning. Lump, Duncan's dachshund, helped cement it with his blatant worship casso. The dog later helped create a rift between the photographer, who by then lived near Picasso's Riviera villa, and the

It was all because Lump became paralyzed and Duncan insisted on rushing him to a specialist in Stuttgart, who treated him so well that he lived for another 10 years. Picasso did not feel that life and death and nature's ways should be tampered with and the relationship cooled.

There is so much-although so subtly-of Duncan in the book that it might have been nice to hear something more about his response to this incident. Here was his more-than-father, the personification of so many of his ideals, cutting him off, as Pi later cut off his own children by Françoise Gilot after that former mistress published a revealing book about him. That's what made Picasso so complex a man, in fact. Duncan is reticent about matters that he considers too private. But the idea of such a book, a book that in the end is about a relationship, really demands a great deal more honesty.

During much of his time with Picasso, Duncan remained silent. His camera even had a silent shutter. "I was there to be totally inconspicuous," he said. "A nonpresent personality. I wasn't there interviewing him. I was recording him."

At other times, Duncan became Picasso's eye on the putside world.

Gregarious Person

"When I'd come back from Vietnam, or photographing in the Kremlin, or driving over the Alps in a blizzard. I tried to share it with him. He didn't go out much, although he welcomed guests. He was the most gregarious of people."

Duncan has the kind of is-this-really-me excitement about his adventures that help make a good descriptive journalist. He can convey the excitement because he feels the excitement. "Sometimes I'm personally motivated, passionate. Why not?" he said. "I go to the DMZ (Demilitarized Zone in Vietnam), my emotions are involved. I don't pretend to be objective. Hell, I'm subjective. I'm not an encyclopedic reporter; I care deeply."

And when he was in the Kremlin photographing the treasures he was thinking, "How can a kid from Kansas City be here doing

So it hurts most that while most of the reviews of the book were laudatory, the Kansas City Star took him to task, mainly for what it considered to be a form of namedropping. Because "Goodbye Picasso" is filled with letters to "Dear Alfred" (Barr, former director of the Museum of Modern Art), "Amigo" (actor Yul Brynner) and "Dear Family" (Gary and Maria Cooper).

Most of the book is taken up with photos of the master and his works made in the early years of Duncan's friendship with Picasso. The rift that Lump's illness brought about was healed when Duncan stopped in while on his way to photograph the Marines in Vietnam, and "those empty years vanished." But there are few photos from e last years in the book.

What there is is a marvelous record of a relationship that would the last years in the book.

be fascinating to know more about. Pleasso as a man would be someone to know, it seems, and so, perhaps, would Duncan. -
